On May 10, 1869, at the junction of the Central and Union Pacific Railways in Promontory, Utah the golden spike was driven in completing the transcontinental railroad.

Source: The American Story: Settling The West, 1996

Melissa Pawlowski
Rutgers University
Spring 2000